

SASSY

By Sarita Griggs

You can tell the kind of woman she is by her stance,
Can't tell what she may have been through when you give her first glance,
But you can tell that she is SASSY.

Planted firm in her beliefs, solid like the ground beneath her feet,
No matter how hard the fight, she won't accept defeat.
And though life sometimes brings tears to her eyes,
Still she smiles, and tilts her face to the sky,
Because she is SASSY.

Steadfast in her faith, strong-willed & resolute,
Defying all odds where others would be destitute,
Clearing the path forward for other sisters to come.
She knows that she is one of many, that she's not the only one,
Who is SASSY.

SASSY in the strength of her spirit,
Confident in herself, when she speaks you can hear it,
Commanding attention with her presence alone,
This is something within her, set deep in her bones.

She is SASSY with her tough love
She will challenge you and then build you back up
And it goes far beyond her eyes or the color of her hair,
Because you see SASSY doesn't discriminate, you can find it everywhere.

Wherever there has been doubt, now replaced with success,
Sorrow is only temporary, because she knows that she is blessed.

She is SASSY when she comes and SASSY when she goes,
And in the depths of her soul, only she and God know,
The power behind her SASSY.
